During the evening W. A. While the traveling public regret the decision of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Sheldon, who have been running the house for some time, to make a change, we hope that the young man a hearty co-operation from a local patronage and the traveling public will find the best of accommodations at the old stand. Mr. Worthen's father having the lively stable business connected with the hotel, the two should be made a paying proposition during the coming summer.

WASHINGTON

Grass Fire, Spreading, Burned Archie Kingsbury's Next Winter's Wood.

A grass fire which started in a pasture owned by Arthur Partridge in the south-west part of the town, near Chelsea line, Sunday afternoon, fanned by a stiff wind, spread rapidly to the adjoining pastures of Archie Kingsbury and Mr. LeMay, threatening the buildings. Telephone calls were sent to Chelsea and Washington and about 75 men were kept busy all the afternoon. Several teams of oxen were employed to plough ground to stop the spread of fire. The fire leaped the trenches several times, but fortunately no serious damage was done. A goodly pile of wood which Mr. Kingsbury had sawed and piled for next winter's use was destroyed.

Mrs. Fred Goodwin and Mrs. Arthur Morey of Chelsea were in town Saturday and called on Mrs. Carrie Downing and L. D. Tillotson.

Mrs. Oliver Martin and Mrs. Wesley Seavey of Williamstown were in town Saturday on a business mission, and called on relatives.

J. Birney Seaver is quite indisposed, suffering much pain in his shoulders and upper part of his back. He was so ill Monday a physician had to be called, but he is now improving slowly.

Mrs. Emma Taplin of Websterville was reinstated in Washington grange Friday evening and passed Saturday and Sunday with Mrs. Ella Spencer.

Pearl Bradbury states that his older brother, Frank, is in the navy, attached to the U. S. transport Hancock, which is busily engaged conveying troops to France.

A letter recently received from Neal McAllister states that he had just received his Christmas boxes March 12. These boxes were mailed Nov. 12, 1917. The sweater, wristers, helmet, etc., were like a white elephant on his hands now, as the weather was so warm the boys were around all day in their shirt sleeves, and he had no place to care for them.

Private McAllister, who is in Co. E, 104th regiment infantry, which has been in the very brunt of the battle recently on the Flanders front, states he has been in the first line trenches several weeks, and the boys expected a furlough, but they were ordered to another front so quickly they did not have time to even think of a furlough. He says France is a beautiful country and he can easily see why the French are so willing to fight for France.

There is a report that Private McAllister was killed, or had lost a leg on the battle front during the week April 21 to 27. For the benefit of those interested, it can be said that the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. McAllister, have not received notification to that effect up to date.

Fred Demas has rented the D. R. Bradbury house, near the creamery, for a year, and moved his family and household goods Wednesday from the Johannesen block, where he has lived for several months past.

From 9 to 10 o'clock the dancing will be interspersed with piano, vocal and violin solos. Ice cream will be on sale throughout the dancing. Admission, 15c; children, 10c; dancing, 50c a couple. Proceeds are for the purchase of books for the public library.
